NutriSync | Answers for Tony

Discussion brief · 7 September 2026 · For founder approval

We intend to move NutriSync forward with or without external investment. Our own capabilities support a focused starting point; investment would accelerate execution, not create our commitment to the business.

1. What is the value proposition?

A cloud-delivered women's wellbeing platform combining practical nutrition, cooking, exercise and recovery, expert-reviewed visual content and optional wearable context. It is designed to learn from each woman's experience—not simply apply a standard cycle template. That advantage must be demonstrated through use and evidence.

2. Why have we discussed €15–25K and €250–350K?

They fund different scopes. €15–25K is a narrow operating bridge supported by founder execution. €250–350K funds a proposed 12-month launch-and-validation programme. They are not competing valuations or amounts to add automatically. The earlier "around €30K" estimate must be reconciled against the scoped bridge.

3. What would €2M buy that the smaller plan would not?

A proposed 24-month Spain programme: greater delivery capacity, a professional food-and-exercise library, distribution through organisations and practitioners, measured marketing, cloud reliability and stronger safety/evaluation. It also allows bounded pregnancy development and international feasibility work without diverting all effort from the core product.

4. What would €5M buy beyond €2M?

More parallel delivery: broader expert content, larger—but gated—marketing and partnership capacity, a separately reviewed pregnancy product, and readiness/pilots for selected international opportunities. It would not mean launching everywhere or spending the entire media budget before acquisition and retention justify it.

5. How will we take a reasonable share of the market?

Start in Spain with a clear daily-use proposition. Combine founder/creator content and digital acquisition with gyms, professionals, employers and communities. Connect ATL awareness to BTL workshops, roadshows, sports events and retail/mall activations. Measure registration → useful action → payment → retention. Build reach from productive channels and contracts, not an arbitrary percentage of TAM.

6. Does international expansion mean Europe only?

No. Australia and Singapore are exploration candidates, alongside selected European/UK and LATAM markets. Lucía's Singapore PR status and existing digital-sector contacts create an introduction route. Government support is worth assessing, but depends on the company, ownership, project and scheme—not PR status alone. No grant or prospective agreement is counted as secured cash.

7. Why does a cloud business need this investment?

Cloud delivery avoids owned infrastructure and hardware manufacturing. It does not remove the cost of people, quality content, acquisition, AI/media usage, cybersecurity, customer support or country-specific legal, privacy, tax and regulatory preparation.

8. What return and investment structure can we offer?

We will present scenario-based returns showing entry valuation, ownership, later dilution and possible exit proceeds—not guaranteed ROI. The preferred instrument and amount must fit the next evidenced milestone and be agreed after financial and legal review. Our baseline remains disciplined progress within committed capacity.

Funding figures are alternative planning envelopes, not validated forecasts or signed commitments. Detailed assumptions, source references and annexes accompany the full proposal.
